TAXES FOR 1921 AND 1922 MUST BE PAID

Before One Can Vote in Primaries Says State Committee. Failure to be Assessed Does Not Relieve Citizen. If Any County or Precinct Fails or Refuses to Follow Regulations Committee Strongly Intimates Official Attention to That County or Precinct. Committee Ruling Based on the Law and the Constitution.

Jackson, Miss., June 19.—The Democratic state executive committee met this morning in the Senate chamber and fixed August 7 as date for the first state primary, the second to be three weeks later, on Aug. 28.

Judge Robert Powell, of this city, chairman, presided, with O. F. Lawrence of Grenada as secretary. A majority of the members were present in person or by proxy.

The committee repudiated the recent ruling issued by Attorney-General Clayton Potter holding that persons may vote in the primaries who have not paid poll taxes, providing they were not assessed with said taxes.

Ruling on Poll Tax.

The ruling of the committee is emphatically to the effect that persons offering to vote must have paid poll taxes for the two previous years. Some members of the committee objected to that action on the ground that it would prevent many newly enfranchised women from voting this year, but a majority was of the opinion that women who have not taken the trouble to qualify in strict accordance with the constitution are not entitled to vote.

The resolution fixing primary dates nd setting forth regulations was submitted to the main body by a committee on resolutions composed of O. F. Lawrence, Walton Shields, Frederick Sullens, Miss Minnie Brewer and L. J. Wise.

R. R. Hardy, campaign manager for ex-Gov. Theo. G. Bilbo, was accorded the privileges of the floor and made protest against that portion of the resolution setting aside the opinion of the Attorney-General. It was also opposed by Edgar G. Williams of McComb City.

Senator Walton Shields vigorously defended this interpretation of the law, declaring that it is in strict accordance with the opinion of a large majority of the lawyers of the state.

Frederick Sullens, of Jackson, pointed out that the federal amendment conferring suffrage on women merely gave them equal rights, and not extraordinary rights; that there can be no justification in law for conferring special voting privileges on women merely because of their sex ,when they have clearly failed to comply with the law. He also pointed out that the poll tax is an obligation every citizen, whether man or woman, owes to the common school fund, and it is a mighty poor type of citizen who fails or refuses to pay it.

Three Vacancies Filled.

Three vacancies were filled. Mrs. Lizzie George Henderson of Greenwood was elected to succeed J. L. Gillespie, deceased; George T. Hill of Tupelo was chosen to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of W. A. Blair of Tupelo; C. E. Gipson of Mount Olive was elected to succeed G. Wood Magee of Monticello, who resigned because he is a candidate for the state senate.

The committee adiourned to meet on July 23rd, on which date all candidates who are without opposition will be declared the party nominees.

The resolutions are:

Be it resolved by the State Democratic Executive Committee of Mississippi that,

First: A primary election is hereby called to be held on Tuesday, the 7th day of August, 1923, and a second primary on the 28th day of August, 1923, throughout the State of Mississippi, for the purpose of selecting candidates of the Democratic party for the various offices to be filled by election in November of this year.

Second: That only white Democrats shall participate in such primary election.

Third: That no person shall participate in such primary unless he or she will be qualified to vote in the election for which the primaries are to be held (which qualification includes the payment on or before February 1st, 1923, of all taxes for which said person, whether male or female, was liable, for two years previous thereto), intends to support the nomination in which he or she participates, and has been in accord with the Democratic party for two years.

Fourth: No person over 21 years of age and under 60 years of age shall be eligible to vote who has not paid poll taxes for the years 1921 and 1922 on or before February 1st, 1923, unless he or she is deaf and dumb ,or blind, or maimed by the loss of hand or foot, or became 21 years of age within the said two years, and this regulation shall apply whether there has been an assessment of a poll tax by the county authorities or not.

Fifth: That county executive committees are hereby directed to preserve the ballots of each and every voting precinct in their counties together with a list of the voters who vote at said primary in the ballot boxes used at each precinct.

Sixth: County executive committees will take notice that the absent voter law is in full force and are hereby enjoined to take the necessary steps to accommodate those voters who expect to be absent at either primary. Voters shall mail absent voter ballots to the circuit clerks of their respective counties.

Seventh: All Democrats are requested to report to this committee any infraction or disregard of these regulations.

Eighth: County executive committees are enjoined to see that these rules and regulations are thoroughly carried out and they are hereby enjoined to promptly send in the returns of said election, as required by section 3705 ,code 1906, Hemingway's Code section 6397.

Ninth: Under the law, fifteen days before any primary election the names of all candidates to be voted for in said election shall be furnished to the proper executive committee and where there shall be but one candidate, the proper executive committee, when the time has expired within which the names of candidates shall be so furnished, shall declare such candidate the nominee; and the cost of printing ballots and transmitting ballot boxes and booths shall be fairly apportioned by the county executive committee, among all the candidates voted for in said primary. So that we direct the county executive committees, where any candidate for a state office, has been lawfully declared the nominee by the State Executive Committee, that such assessment as has been made for the cost of printing ballots and transmitting ballot boxes and booths shall be returned to such state candidate so declared the nominee, if the same has heretofore been paid.

Tenth: When a woman is assessed for taxes in her husband's name, and is registered in her own name or vice versa—for example, John Doe's wife is assessed as Mrs. John Doe but registers as Mrs. Mary Doe—she shall not be denied the exercise of her right to vote merely because of this seeming conflict.

JOE BROWN CELEBRATES FIFTIETH BIRTHDAY

Has His First "Party" on Fiftieth Birthday. Gabfest With "Tadpoles" Living in Grenada.

The front veranda of the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Brown was invaded by "tdapoles" on the evening of Tuesday, June 19th, between the hours of 6:30 and 7:30, the occasion being the celebration of the fiftieth birthday of the head of the house and in honor of his brothers, Dr. T. J. Brown, of Grenada, W. J. Brown, of Gulfport, and J. G. Brown, of Hattiesburg. The invited guests were those living in Grenada who were born in Yalobusha County and also R. Pressgrove, a Tallahatchian, and J. B. and C. A. Perry, Grenada Countians, all three brothers-in-law of the host.

"Yalobusha," in the Choctaw Indian tongue, means "tadpole place" and naturally, those born in Yalobusha County are tadpoles. There were nineteen of them present, the one longest a resident of Grenada having 42 years to his credit, the shortest having lived here 5 years. The average for the 19 is 23 years residence in Grenada and the total time all have lived here is 424 years.

Col. R. V. Pearson, dean of the Yalobusha Club, added to the occasion by his courtly dignity and cheerful humor. At the marriage of Mr. Brown's father and mother, Mr. Pearson acted as best man, having been the boyhood friend and schoolmate of the then young groom.

Besides being served with cigars, cigarettes and conversation, a lovely birthday cake, presented by the young ladies in Mr. Brown's office, was cut and served with delicious punch.

Mrs. Brown was assisted by her sister, Mrs. R. Pressgrove, her daughter, Mrs. T. B. Revell, Jr., and Misses Hazel Inman and Pauline McGlade.

Those present, besides the host and his three brothers, were Messrs. R. V. Pearson, I. O. Pearson, R. F. Hubert, J. E. Clack, Jay Gore, J. H. Neely, J. E. Bull, J. C. Garner, F. S. Yorks, J. T. Gum, J. D. Crenshaw, Dr. J. P. Broadhurst, J. L. Avent, J. J. Hardy, T. P. Wilburn, T. E. Neely and W. E. Jackson, all of whom declared the occasion to have been a most jolly one and to have been thoroughly enjoyable.

Mr. Brown regretted that several of his best friends were not invited because he did not know that they were native sons of Yalobusha until too late to get in communication with them.

BATESVILLE PANOLIAN HITS THE TRAIL FOR CONNER.

Ably Written Editorial Setting Forth Reasons for Being for Mike.

For many years Mississippi has been torn from center to circumference with political factional strife. Before this condition came about the people of Mississippi elevated statesmen to public office and positions of leadership. No matter which side of the fence we have been on, the thinking men and women of Mississippi today are awakening to the fact that Mississippi has suffered while a few small, self-seeking politicians have taken advantage of the psychological moment, played on the prejudices of the honest people and spealed their way into office and profited thereby. It is time to stop, look and listen. Industry has been kept from the State. The farmer and the laboring man have been fed up on high-sounding, bombastic promises of relief and the reduction of taxes while the only relief and reduction that has come to him out of all these high flown, preelection promises is that he has been relieved of his money, and the income from his labor and products reduced. The time is ripe for a statesman to lead us away from this precipice of factional strife. We need a chance to forget petty political matters and devote our thoughts and time thus wasted to the building up of our homes and our farms in order that we may produce more and work out ways and means of getting more for what we produce.

A realization of this is some of the reasons why we think that Sennett Conner is the best man in the present race for Governor. His early training and environment was wholesome and he grew up under good influences. He is one of the best trained men from an educational standpoint that has entered politics in Mississippi in many years.

In his school days, by steady application, he did the task that was before him and thus distinguished himself as a student. He was recognized among his fellow students as a leader and his honesty, integrity, and fairness won the respect of all. His record since entering public life has shown him to be fair and practical. He is a practical student of conditions confronting Mississippi today and is well informed on the social, economic and political questions now confronting the State. As Speaker of the House of Representatives for eight years and a member of the State Bond Improvement Commission he has become familiar with the entire system of our State Government and he can step into the Governor's office with the familiarity and knowledge of the State's business as no other man in the race. He has had more experience in the government affairs than any other man in the race excepting the one that has just come out of jail and that has become the joke of the State in attempting to joke his way from the jail cell to the Governor's mansion. Conner is a practical man and is a true friend of the people. He has never been replaced from any office or position on account of any political affiliation nor is he the picked candidate of any one man, group of men, corporation or interest. He has no sore toes to nurse nor political scores to pay. He has grown into State affairs by natural leadership, fairness, knowledge of governmental affairs and his sincere interest and efforts to better conditions in Mississippi rather than build up political machinery. Having no political scores to pay, no political skeletons in the closet and not being a man picked to agitate further factional line-up, he is the real friend of the people of Mississippi and he is thus the one man in the race who will have time to turn his entire attention and influence to the affairs of Mississippi and the welfare of our people. He has come into the affairs of Mississippi in a statesmanlike way. He recognizes the rights and interests of the people. He is not going over the State making the people high sounding, bombastic promises. He is telling the truth in a plain practical way. Wherever he goes he causes the people to realize that Mississippi is sick and in a weakened condition from political factonal strife, and that the remedy and relief is not to double the dose of factionalism but that the patient needs building up by helping its people get more for what they produce and giving them more opportunities to produce something on which to live and prosper. His vision and the practical remedy which he is advocating in the present crisis is that of a statesman rather than a peanut politician.

RUSSELL'S ACTION DISAPPROVED BY AMERICAN LEGION

Jackson, Miss., June 20.—"The American Legion in Mississippi is keenly disappointed that Gov. Russell declines to allow the United States government to take charge of Sharp Welborn and place him in a government institution devoted exclusively to treatment of mentally diseased veterans of the world war," declared John B. Hudson, state adjutant of the Legion.

In a recent edition of the Magnolia State Legionnaire, the official organ for the Mississippi department of the Legion, it was declared that Welborn, who is serving a prison sentence of eight years at Oakley, to which he was sentenced when he plead guilty to a charge of manslaughter in Jasper county in 1921, had been adjudged "mentally incompetent" as a result of his war services. The newspaper based its claim, it said, upon official reports received from the veterans' bureau of the government. The official reports show that his mental condition was determined, after thorough examination, by government neuro-psychiatric experts who held that his condition was "temporary total."

"The American Legion does not ask that a pardon be granted to Welborn," it was pointed out by the adjutant. "It only asks that Welborn be turned over to the government, who will place him in a government hospital at Fort McKenzie, Wyoming, where he can be given treatment for his mental condition which he is clearly entitled to receive. The government would transport him to Wyoming, under guard, and will assume full responsibility for him. In view of this precaution being offered it is without foundation to charge that he would be dangerous to the peace of the state. When Welborn has been restored to his normal condition and the governor so desired, the government would return Welborn to his custody.

"Certainly Welborn would be a better asset to the state after he is restored to his normal condition than he is with his mind unbalanced. The government is ready to receive Walborn the moment the governor gives his approval."

REMARKABLE SHOWING BY CONNER

An argument arose Thursday morning in the store of Smith & Ray among a group of political enthusiasts as to what candidate for Governor would receive the most votes in this section. It was finally decided to stop each man who passed the store and ascertain his preference in the governor's race. The first twenty-nine voters who passed were called in and asked the direct question as to what man that person would vote for. Of the 29 voters called in, 29 of them, without hesitation, stated they were going to vote for Conner. A majority of them had formerly favored some other candidate but for one reason or another they had decided to vote for Conner.

Many had heard him speak, and they were heartily in his favor because of the impression made by him in his speech. Others were in favor of Conner because of the strenuous fight he is making against the opposition, the other candidates seemingly having left the matter to Conner to bear the brunt of the fight against the other crowd.

While the above incident is of course unusual, and Conner is not going to keep up any such average, the rapid gain he is making is really remarkable, and if his gains in other sections are as great as in this section, it certainly looks as if the talented Speaker will be the next Governor.

It is a significant fact that Bilbo and Franklin seem to be centering their fight against Conner, while they seldom mention the other candidates.—Madison County Herald.

ONE NEGRO KILLS ANOTHER.

On last Sunday about noon a negro by the name of Burr Reed was instantly killed by a bullet fired from a pistol in the hands of James Taylor, another negro, the bullet entering the temple just above the left eye and plowing through the brain.

The negro who did the shooting claims, as do several witnesses, that the shooting was accidental. Immediately after the killing, Taylor took to his heels, naturally fearing the consequences of his act. The county's bloodhounds, handled by Bob Woods, were immediately put on the trail which they followed until five o'clock that afternoon, being called off by Sheriff Dogan after learning the direction taken by the fleeing negro. He was taken in custody at the home of his father-in-law about dusk that evening on the Perry place about six miles west of town. The dogs trailed him in that direction and when they were called off it was thought that the negro would be found at the place where he was taken. He is now in the county jail.

The dead negro was employed by the Gayoso Lumber Co. while Taylor worked for the Grenada Grocery Co. Both had good reputations and there was evidently no cause for any difficulty between them.

FRANKLIN'S HEAD PLACED IN LION'S MOUTH

Says Lee Russell in Another Remarkable Epistle Written by His Excellency. Not Pleased with Debate with Conner. Conner Says He Is Making the Fight Against the Present Regime While Some of the Other Candidates Are Fighting for Votes. Thinks It Fair That Those Whose Battle He Is Waging Should Stand By Him at the Polls. Mike Scores Again.

Jackson, June 16.—Declaring that moves like that of Franklin at Raleigh "mean suicide" and that he would "warn Franklin never to stick his head in a lion's mouth like that" again, Lee M. Russell, letter-writing governor of Mississippi, addressed a bitter rebuke to Dr. W. R. Ward of Raleigh, blaming him and "our friends" for permitting Mike Conner to eat Franklin alive in their recent joint debate.

Speaker Conner gave the letter to the press while passing through Jackson, stating that he made a promise in his debate with Franklin at Kosciusko Tuesday night to show tangible proof from one of Franklin's closests friends and allies as to the truth of the newspaper reports of the Raleigh debate.

What Russell Wrote.

"Russell is always prating about the subsidized press of Mississippi," said Mr. Conner, "and Mr. Franklin accused some of my friends of manufacturing the account of the Raleigh encounter. Here is a letter from the Kaiser bemoaning the predicament into which "The Crown Prince" got himself and threatening vengeance on the splendid gentleman at which door he falsely laid the blame. Read the letter and decide for yourself as to the truth or falsity of the statements:

"Mississippi Executive Department
"Jackson,
"LEE M. RUSSELL, Governor,
"MACEY DINKINS, Private Secretary,
MISS BERNICE YELVERTON,
Assistant Secretary.

"Dr. W. R. Ward,
"Raleigh, Miss.
"Dear Dr. Ward:

"Our friends are very much dissatisfied with the arrangements for the Franklin speaking made in your town. They feel there was a blunder somewhere. Some of them say that this was a 'put up job' to have Conner follow Franklin with no rejoiner. Any speaker is foolish to let another speaker follow him with no rejoiner. This gives the closing man all the opportunity to stab the first speaker. I do not know who arranged this, but it was a blundered job, and I will warn Franklin never to stick his head in a lion's mouth like that. Anybody would have known that the Antis would be out in full force, and the first speaker would be helpless under the circumstances. Some of our friends think you arranged this purposely. Some of them were in the office yesterday, and that was the advices. Of course I do not think you would have knowingly arranged this thusly, but the point is that you and our friends should not have permitted it. If you move like this, it means suicide.

"I will be glad to see Dr. Reagan in your behalf. I understand you have some other applicants in your county good friends of ours.

"Your friend,
(Signed) "LEE M. RUSSELL,
"Governor."

Is Late Outburst.

"This latest outburst from Lee Russell," said Mr. Conner, "ought to convince everyone as to the truth of the Raleigh news item respecting our chance meeting there. Mr. Franklin, I understand, yielded his time in the morning to Hon. Stokes Robertson, and that threw us together in the afternoon. He attacked me in his opening speech, and I merely answered his attack.

"But another angle revealed by this letter is far more important in that it shows how Governor Russell and his machine have gotten a strangle hold on the state, and have built up a political regime. I am appealing in this campaign for a business administration in place of the present corrupt political one. I believe that the thousands and thousands of upright men and women in our state are going to get together this August and drive these corrupt political money-changers from the temple and turn the capitol once more into the center of clean government in a great state. As governor of Mississippi I would seek to rededicate this splendid edifice to the service of all the people. Lee Russell and his political renegades must go. While he and his henchmen are using the governor's office for hatching political plots and writing letters on executive stationery, the resources of Mississippi remain undeveloped, the farmers wait for co-operative marketing and the people are crushed beneath a burden of high taxes resulting partly from waste and extravagance, the lack of a central purchasing agency, and the appointment of cheap politicians to office instead of sensible business men and women.

"I am making the same fight for decency, cleanliness and a business government that I have been making for eight years," concluded Mr. Conner. "Some of the other gentlemen running say they stand for high ideals and a better Mississippi, but they are apparently afraid to take off their coats, roll up their sleeves and take the leadership in the fight to oust the present crowd that Lee Russell has gathered around him, and which seeks to perpetuate itself. I believe the people who sympathize with my stand will back me with their votes rather than applaud me and vote for one of these middle of the road fellows. It is not my fight. It is the struggle of the mass of honest high-toned Mississippians to clean up the state. The opportunity to lead has come to me, and I am not pussy-footing. I am making this fight while other candidates seek to get the votes. I think it only fair that those who approve my stand should back me at the polls and I confidently believe they are going to do it."

QUITE A COMPLIMENT TO ROY DOAK

Mr. L. J. Doak has been placed on the program to make an address at the national meeting of the Association of Winchester Clubs which meets in Chicago June 25-29. This is indeed a high compliment to Mr. Doak, when it is considered that the membership of the association totals 5,500, but his many friends in Grenada feel sure he will measure up well to the duty assigned him. Mr. Doak has twice served as president of the Southern Association of the Clubs. He is one of Grenada's outstanding young business men. He comes from a home where the first care of the father and the departed mother was the children and their training, and he reflects very happily the results of his early training.

STORES TO CLOSE ON WEDNESDAY AFTERNOONS

Beginning next Wednesday afternoon, June 27th, at one o'clock, all the business houses of Grenada, with one or two exceptions, will be closed on Wednesday afternoon of each week during the heated season, or until the first week in September when they will all again be open on these afternoons.

The reason for this move is because that it gives the workers an opportunity in the middle of the week for rest and recreation which is so very important during hot weather and it has been pointed out that, if all close, none will lose thereby.

It would be well for shoppers to keep this fact in mind and to make their usual Wednesday afternoon purchases on Wednesday morning.

REV. W. E. FARR TO REMAIN IN GRENADA

Will Continue at Pastor of First Baptist Church After His Return From Tour of Holy Lands.

Rev. W. E. Farr has asked The Sentinel to state that he was as much surprised as anyone else when he saw in the Commercial Appeal last Thursday, June 14th, that he had accepted a call to Moorhead and that he would be pastor there after his return from his proposed tour of the Holy Lands. He intends to remain in Grenada.

Dr. Farr and his wife will leave next Thursday, June 28th, for their foreign trip and during his absence his nephew, Rev. Mr. Patterson, will fill the pulpit at the First Baptist Church.

WOMAN'S CLUB WANTS COMMUNITY HOUSE

The Grenada County Woman's Club, as this paper understands, is agitating the erection of a Community House on the city property on Green and Line Streets which is better known as Rabbit Track. It is proposed to have a reading room in which will be found the best books and magazines and which will be continually under the care of the club women. The approximate cost is expected to be around five thousand dollars.

A community house would be a fine thing for the town and the plans of the club will no doubt go through for whenever the good women of a community get behind a movement, they generally put it across.

MASONS WILL OBSERVE ST. JOHN'S DAY MONDAY

Dutch Luncheon in Lodge Rooms. T. Webber Wilson to be Guest of Honor. Will Address Craft at Courthouse at 8:00 O'clock p. m.

On next Monday, June 25th, the Masonic fraternity in Grenada will observe St. John's Day with a Dutch Luncheon in the lodge rooms at 6:30 p. m. to which all members of the craft are invited. The guest of honor will be Hon. T. Webber Wilson, of Laurel, Mississippi, who will address the Masons in the courthouse at eight o'clock that night, his subject being one that will be of especial interest to the fraternity. Mr. Wilson is member of Congress from the Sixth district and is one of the most brilliant and talented orators of the State. Those who heard him here on the occasion of the commencement exercises of the high school were more than delighted with his manner of address and his coming to Grenada to address the Masons is awaited with much interest on the part of the members of the lodge.

Only Masons will be admitted and the lodge is to be tyled in first degree.

GRENADA BANK OPENS SAVINGS DEPARTMENT

In this issue of The Sentinel may be seen the announcement of the Grenada Bank that, in addition to its other banking facilities, it has opened a savings department and will pay depositors three per cent interest on savings accounts.

This move will fill a long-felt need in Grenada and this territory for it gives the man of small means as well as the more wealthy an opportunity to accumulate something while at the same time paying them to save their money. Most great fortunes may be traced to small beginnings and a little money put away from time to time will gradually make one independent. "Save your pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves."

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

The board of supervisors of Grenada County met Monday, June 4, at the court house, the same being the first Monday and a regular meeting of said board. There were present: K. Mattingly, Dist. 1; J. H. James, Dist. 2 and president of board; Frank Anderson, Dist 3; Ira G. Roundsaville, Dist 4; G. P. Cunningham, Dist. 5; J. B. Keeton, clerk, and D .W. Dogan, whereupon the following proceedings were had:

Ordered that Peter Carew be and he is hereby employed as janitor for a period of one year at and for the salary of $7.00 per week, beginning April 1st.

It appearin gthat C. C. Ingram was erroneousl yassessed for the year 1922, with road and pol ltax, he being over the age of 60 ears, and not liable for said tax, and that said C. C. The following ordinance was introduced, its adoption moved and seconded and put to a vote, all the aldermen voting for its passage, it was declared duly adopted and ordered spread on the minutes, as follows:

Be it ordered by the Mayor and Board of Aldermen of the City of Grenada, Mississippi,

Sec. 1. That there be and hereby is levied a privilege tax upon all callings, trades, professions and occupations and such shall be paid into the city of Grenada, Mississippi, before such callings, trades, professions or occupations can be carried on within said city.

Sec 2. Any person, firm or corporation paying the privilege license tax due to the city hereunder for the operation of a moving picture show, theatorium or similar attraction or amusement, shal lnot, however, be required to pay in addition thereto a tax to said city for the operation of an opera house or theater when such operation is carried on in the same room o rhal lwhere such moving picture show is usuall yconducted.

Sec. 3. If any portion of this ordinance is invalid for any reason, this fact shall not affect the balance of this ordinance nor render such valid portions thereof invalid.

Sec. 4. That this ordinance take effect and be in force from and after passage.

To the Mayor and Board of Aldermen of the City of Grenada:

Gentlemen:

Your committee appointed at a prevous meeting of the board to ascertain what savings in fuel for the water and light plant might be had by using shavings and the cost of piping same from the planing mill to the power house, and also to make the railroad a price on furnishing said company with water, beg to submit this, our report:

We believe the cost of piping shavings to plant would be about three or four hundred dollars; the saving in fuel would depend somewhat on the amount of shavings furnished. Your committee woul drecommend the cost of piping and use of shavings if shavings are free. We suggest the water at a cost of five cents or above per thousand gallons and that the city make every possible effort to supply the water, as the committee is of the opinion that it would be a good business proposition for the plant.

Signed, W. P. Ferguson and W. R. Schultz, committee.

To J. C. Garner, special police of the City of Grenada:

You are hereby commanded to serve the following notice personally upon each of the respective parties to whom it is addressed as required by law.

LESSON FOR JULY 1

JOHN, THE BAPTIST

(May be used with temperance applications.)

LESSON TEXT—Luke 3:3-8; 7:24-28.

GOLDEN TEXT—"He shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink." —Luke 1:15.

REFERENCE MATERIAL — Matt. 3:1-17; 11:2-15; Mal. 3:1-6.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Baby, John.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Man Who Prepared the Way for Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Herald of the Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Character and Work of John, the Baptist.

John was a great man. In announcing his birth the angel said, "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord." He was not only great in the Lord's sight, but was great when measured by the standards of men. In the teaching of this lesson a survey should be made of John's life and work.

I. Birth and Ministry Foretold (Matt. 3:3; cf. Isa. 40:3).

He was thought about and his work planned long before he was born. He came as God's messenger. His life was a plan of God. He was said to be a man sent from God (John 1:6). There is a sense in which every life is planned—everyone is sent from God. Everyone should remember that God has something to do with his life.

II. His Character.

1. Humble (Luke 3:4). He did not seek human praise and commendation. His supreme concern was to proclaim the Christ. He did not make himself prominent—was only a voice calling upon people to prepare for the Messiah. His person and habits were a protest against the luxury and hypocritical formality of his time.

2. Courageous (Luke 3:7). He faced a great multitude and struck hard at their sins. He did not trim his message to suit the crowd. He even denounced the religious leaders of his time and demanded of them fruits worthy of repentance.

III. His Preaching (Luke 3:3-8).

1. Demanded Repentance (vv. 3-6). Suddenly emerging from his seclusion, he came into the region of the Jordan as a messenger of God, calling upon the people to repent in preparation for the coming of the Messiah.

2. Demanded Proofs of Penitence (vv. 7, 8). He insisted that their false religions be abandoned—their sinful hearts renovated—showed them that the vile passions of their souls must be uprooted. A change of mind, that is, the turning of the soul from sin to God, was necessary. This is a preparation which must be made before one can see and experience the salvation of God.

IV. Jesus' Testimony to John (Luke 7:24-28). Because John did not see the interval between the "sufferings of Christ" and the "glory that should follow" he was perplexed. Therefore he sent a deputation to Jesus for light. The prophets did not see, or at least did not make clear, the interval between the crucifixion of Christ and His second coming. The two events were so presented as to appear to be in close succession. John in his preaching has stressed the mighty judgments which should take place at the appearance of the Messiah. The turn things were taking (he himself being imprisoned with the gloomy prospect of death), was in great contrast to the coming of the Messiah in fiery judgment—"the ax is laid unto the root of the trees" and "the chaff is burned up with unquenchable fire" (Matt. 3:10, 12). The trend of events puzzled him. It was not lack of faith, but confusion of mind that prompted his inquiry. Christ's testimony defended him against any such an accusation. Christ vindicated him against a vacillating mind because of the storms of persecution. He was not like a reed shaken by the wind (v. 24). He had lived a life of self-denial, therefore he did not deny his faith in Christ because of the dungeon (v. 25). Jesus declared that no greater prophet had arisen. That which perplexed John was the delay in judgment—the day of God's patience while gathering out the Church. This was a truth not disclosed to the prophets—that which Paul made known—because a special revelation had been granted (Eph. 3:3).

V. The Martyrdom of John (Mark 6:14-29).

While John was in prison Herod had frequent interviews with him. John boldly told him that it was unlawful for him to have his brother's wife. He did not mince matters even with the king. This so enraged the licentious Herodias that she caused his death. He sealed his testimony with his blood.

Seeking the Name of God.

The Turks carefully collect every scrap of paper that comes in their way, because the name of God may be written thereon.—Richter.

Men of Genius.

Men of genius are often dull and inert in society; as the blazing meteor, when it descends to earth, is only a stone.—Longfellow.

Prosperity and Adversity.

He that swells in prosperity will be sure to shrink in adversity.—Colton.

LESSON FOR JUNE 24

REVIEW

Great Men and Women of the Old Testament—Devotional Reading, Psalm 99.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." —Heb. 12:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Favorite Stories of the Quarter.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Favorite Heroes and Heroines of the Quarter.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Some Great Characters of the Old Testament.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons for Today From the Lives of Old Testament Characters.

Three methods are suggested. The first method is taken from Crannell's Pocket Lessons. The general subject is, "What Twenty Centuries Teach the Twentieth."

I. The Lesson of Vision.

1. Abraham, the Pioneer— Lesson 2.
2. Moses, the Nation Builder—Lesson 4.
3. Isaiah, the Kingdom Seer—Lesson 9.

II. The Lesson of Leadership.

1. Samuel, the Foundation Layer—Lesson 6.
2. David, the Solidifier—Lesson 7.
3. Nehemiah, the Rebuilder—Lesson 11.

III. The Lesson of Courage.

1. Elijah, the Reformer—Lesson 8.
2. Jeremiah, the Truth Teller—Lesson 10.
3. Esther, the Intercessor — Lesson 12.

IV. The Lesson of Character.

1. Ruth, the Woman Who Clave—Lesson 5.
2. Joseph, the Son Who Remembered—Lesson 8.

V. The Lesson of Life.

Jesus, the Summit of the Old Testament, Foundation of the New, Life of Both—Lesson 1.

The second method — Character Study. The different characters can be assigned the week before, upon which the pupils are to bring a brief essay or report giving a sketch of the particular hero.

A third method is to give a brief summary of each lesson.

Lesson 1—The truth concerning the risen Christ is the answer for all our questions and the impulse of our testimony to others.

Lesson 2—Abraham in obedience to the call of God went out not knowing whither he went. He so completely trusted God that he was willing to go all the way with Him.

Lesson 3—Though Joseph was sold into slavery because of the hatred of his brethren, God exalted him to a place of power in Egypt.

Lesson 4—Even though Pharaoh's decree was for the destruction of all the male children of the Hebrews, Moses was preserved and educated in the Egyptian court.

Lesson 5—When Ruth became acquainted with the true God, she chose to turn her back upon her native land and kindred and identify herself with God's people.

Lesson 6—Samuel was given in answer to his mother's prayer. In early boyhood his mother gave him back to the Lord.

Lesson 7—When Samuel went to anoint a new king over Israel, he had all the sons of Jesse pass before him. Although to human eyes the eldest seemed fitted to be a king, and although outer appearances were favorable, the inner reality as seen by God was against him.

Lesson 8—Elijah threw down to the people a ringing challenge, calling upon the people to decide between Baal and the Lord. The God who answered by fire was to be the true God.

Lesson 9—Upon the sight of the Lord, Isaiah was convicted of his sin. When cleansed by fire from the divine altar he heard and responded to the call of God.

Lesson 10—Jeremiah, for his faithfulness in making known the Word of the Lord, was most bitterly hated and persecuted. Though he was regarded as a traitor and put into the place of death, he remained faithful to God.

Lesson 11—When Nehemiah heard of the distress of his brethren in Jerusalem, he was moved with pity for them. Although he enjoyed prosperity, he grieved over the grave distress of his people.

Lesson 12—In the providence of God, Esther came to be queen of Persia at an opportune time to save her people. There is a definite place and purpose in every life.

Life-Force.

Life-force, which is another name for God, seeks ever for new outlets; it breaks through mind into something higher still.—G. A. Studdert Kennedy.

The Art of Pleasing.

The art of pleasing consists in being pleased. To be amiable is to be satisfied with one's self and others.—Hazlitt.

Banish Self-Conceit.

The business of a philosopher is ... self-conceit.—Epictetus.

REV. E. B. MILLER, A. M., D. D.

By S. C. Harris

Born February 2, 1853, in Greenville, S. C. His parents removed to Eudora, De Soto County, Miss., in 1857, he being only four year old. In those days such a journey was no little task, the removal being made in road wagons and carriages and required many days.

He grew to manhood on his father's plantation, developing energy and ambition that no other place can equal. His early education was received from his mother, an educated lady. Later he entered Union University, Murfreesboro, Tenn. He graduated from this institution in 1880, receiving the A. B. degree. The subject of his graduating address was "The Reign of Law in the Natural World," which was highly complimented.

He completed the full course at the Southern Baptist Seminary, Louisville, June, 1883, entitling him to the Th. D. degree. His thesis was on "The Minister as a Citizen." It received the commendation of Dr. John A. Broadus and the Courier-Journal, the leading city paper.

In the summer of 1882 he studied Hebrew under the noted Dr. W. R. Harper, Union Theological Seminary, Chicago. The summer of 1883 was spent at Chautauqua, N. Y., taking lectures, later graduating in Chautauqua reading courses. After he completed the full course at Southern Baptist Seminary, the Southwestern University, his Alma Mater conferred on him the A. M. degree.

On Sept. 5, 1993, he was united in marriage to Miss Allie Spencer Everhart of Louisville, daughter of Laura Lewis and George Fountain Everhart of that city. She was an earnest, faithful worker in the Baptist church and here again Dr. Miller scored a victory in winning the heart and hand of one of the most lovely young ladies in that city, adorned with all the graces and accomplishments so necessary for a pastor's wife. Time has proven the wisdom of this union for as the years pass from the calendar of time, this oneness of sentiment, of love and helpful co-operation deepens and broadens all the while, growing and ripening into perfect love.

His first pastorate was the Baptist church at Grenada, Miss., where he built the commodious brick church, and remodeled the pastorium. During this pastorate he delivered the commencement address at Southwestern University. In 1893, he accepted the pastorate at Arkadelphia, Ark. His work here was blessed by a number of young men being called of God to the ministry.

While living in Arkadelphia the Southwestern University again honored him with the D. D. degree, the crowning token of its approval and appreciation of his living and accomplishments. He has been called a builder, so, true to his reputation, here he erected a beautiful pastorium and built a large addition to the church.

His next pastorate was at West Point, Miss. During this period he dedicated a building at Blue Mountain given by his dear friend, Mr. S. L. Hearn, in memory of the latter's daughter, Mrs. Carrie Hearn Hurt. Following this he took up evangelistic work, holding successful meetings in several of the adjoining and neighboring states. This proved too much for his throat and nerves, so he gave up this work and engaged in private business in West Point, and assisted the smaller churches that most needed him, near his established home "Sans Souci."

Dr. Miller is not an egotist; he has never sought to press himself to the front for public applause; to make a display of his educational training and natural endowments. He has rather held back and possibly too much so, due to his aversion of the appearance of egotism. But in no sense is he a weakling or lacking in discreet courage. He has responded to the call of duty with that enthusiasm that knows no fear, nor shrinks at responsibility. He has been faithful and efficient to every trust and has accomplished much of worth in his ministerial work, which was hampered and halted as above set forth, in its closing, and while conditions forbade his active and regular preaching, yet he kept the faith, the zeal and fervency of heart for the advancement of our Master's cause. He is a sound, able theologian, and his retirement from ministerial work was and is a regretable impairment to the cause of which he was such an able and impressive exponent. There is a sermon in every one of his prayers—a power that touches the hearts of his hearers. His living, his accomplishments and his unsullied, noble purposes and faithfulness are indeed a rich heritage worth perpetuation and a priceless legacy to the Baptist church and his family in particular. It has been said that "the bad men do lives after them while the good is often interred with their bones," but it is otherwise in his life, for the good accomplished by Dr. Miller still lives and still grows.—West Point Leader.

Mr. Miller was universally popular in Grenada and has many friends here who are always interested in him.

IS CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING BENEFICIAL TO THE COMMUNITY GENERALLY?

Although co-operative marketing is a recent enterprise, co-operation is by no means in itself a modern practice. As far back as history goes, our ancestors have been known to understand the value of combining themselves either for protection or for building their homes. When they wished to put up a new village all men worked on one dwelling until it was finished and then started on the next. In this way the little town was soon established.

There is a story told of a king who wished to show his sons the power of union. He gave them a bundle of small sticks and instructed each in turn to try his strength at breaking it. Although every youth struggled with all his muscle, he could not succeed. The king, however, untying the bundle and taking the sticks separately, explained how easily the bundle could be broken. "So it is with us," he said, "United we stand, divided we fall."

This great lesson, handed down through the generations, has become very useful to the small farmers. They have found out that by forming co-operative marketing associations, they can sell their produce in a better way and can get more for it. In hog-raising sections, they decide upon regular times to make co-operative shipments. On the appointed days, each man brings in his hogs, which are weighed and classified at the scales and pens owned by the association. The classes are governed by the weight and the amount of fat. If a hog having the weight of class No. 1 is poor, he is placed in class No. 2, if very poor, in class No. 3. Therefore, the farmer is shown the value of high quality animals. A record of their number, class and weight is sent to the commission man and a duplicate record is kept on file. After the commission is paid, expenses are defrayed, and a small part deducted for the operative fund, each shipper receives payment according to the record of his hogs. The same principle is employed in marketing potatoes, corn, peas, etc.

The association is able to do many things which one farmer alone could not underetake. It can employ experienced men to find the best markets. It can purchase scales and other equipment used by all its members. It can build pens for their convenience. It can secure fertilizer at a lower price by buying enough for all members. And it enables the farmer to receive a better price for his products through co-operative shipments.

In Dunklin county, the leadng cotton county in Missouri, the cotton growers have built co-operative gins. Previous to this year they have sold their cotton in the seed. It is estimated that they will save from ten to fifteen dollars a bale by doing their own ginning, while the matter of pure seed alone will mean an increase of twenty-five dollars an acre over mixed seed.

Another case where such associations have helped greatly is that of the raisin growers of California. They faced the tremendous problem of disposing of a 100,000-ton surplus over average years. Yet they sold it at a profit. The members of the association pooled their crops, selling them co-operatively. They owed their success to the highly efficient marketing organization. Foreign markets were created and advertising at home increased consumption. The product was cleaned, graded, sorted and packed in attractive boxes. The consumer then received for his money a box of clean raisins.

However, not all producers have had advantage of such an organization. For example, a Michigan farmer shipped a carload of extra quality Duchess apples. He received a check for $96.40. The cartage for hauling them nine miles to a boat was $7.50, boat freight $43.20, commission $9.45 and baskets $32.00, a total of $87.15. After settling for materials, machinery and pruning, he had to pay $25 for producing 155 bushels of delicious apples which, sold at retail, brought $2.50 a bushel, or $387.50 in all. Furthermore, he had to let the rest of his crop rot on the trees because he could not afford to harvest it. Luscious fruit fell to the ground and decayed in countleess orchards while people in other parts of the country were doing without it on account of high prices.

This apple-grower was at the mercy of the middle-man who cared not

The grocery merchants in Grenada no doubt believe that Sentinel readers don't eat—for you rarely ever see a grocery advertisement in this paper.

So it is with hardware—the hardware dealers must think that the users of hardware don't read The Sentinel.

Watch Mike. He's hitting the same lick.

Mike has never wavered but his assailants are saying that his blows get harder and harder and faster and faster.

"I am the door; by me if any man enter in he shall be saved and shall go in and out and find pasture."—John 10:9.

Better is the poor that walketh in His uprightness than he that is perverse in his ways, though he be rich."—Solomon.

The home stretch is on in the Governor's race. Watch Mike Conner. He has been speeding up faster and faster ever since the word "go" was given and is coming down the home stretch in the lead.

"The bitter attitude" existing between Conner and Whitfield seems to exist only in the minds and wishes of a few Franklin supporting newspapers only. The anguish of these editors is pathetic.—Madison County Herald.

Lee Russell says Franklin's debating with Mike Conner is like a man putting his head in a lion's mouth. Of course, Lee did not intend for that to get out, but the doctor to whom he wrote the letter gave it out. Read it. It appears elsewhere in The Sentinel.

Under the regulations passed by the State Democratic Executive Committee for holding the primaries in August only Democrats can participate and all taxes for the years 1921 and 1922 must have been paid on or before the first day of February this year, and this requirement holds good whether the party has been assessed or not.

The Grenada Sentinel is three score and ten years young, having celebrated its seventieth birthday last week. The Sentinel, edited by that prince of gentlemen and able editor, O. F. Lawrence, is one of the South's leading weeklies, and it is a paper that has convictions and is not afraid to express them when the occasion arises. Long live Editor Lawrence and The Sentinel.—Woodville Republican.

IT TAKES SOME PEOPLE A LONG TIME TO WAKE UP.

In the fall of 1920, almost immediately after the last State adoption of school text books, we called attention to the bad job Gov. Lee Russell's Text Book Commission had permitted to be put over on the people, but not until recently has the matter been given serious consideration by some in the State who ought to have at once raised a voice of protest against the outrageous deal.

JUMPING ON NEWSPAPERS.

One of the favorite pastimes of some candidates is to take a crack at newspapers in general. The mass of the people know that a candidate never makes a broad charge against newspapers in general if that candidate has any real platform to run on.—Carrollton Conservative.

The Conservative might have added to the words "real platform to run on" or "character to stand on."

The fact is that only the little whopping jays whose brains are as sterile as the sands of the Sahara Desert and those whose character would befoul a pig sty ever talk about the press being "solidly against" them.

PREACH THE BIBLE OR QUIT.

Nearly all the great religious denominations of the country held their annual conventions last week. In practically every one there was a great debate as to whether preachers should stick to the Bible or should put Darwin with his system of evolution ahead of Jesus Christ and His teachings.

True, in most of the conventions the majority voted in favor of the Bible as it is written, but the very fact that it took a hard fight to endorse the Scriptures shows that many of our preachers no longer accept the word of God as given in His Hold Word as final authority by which they must be governed. This kind of nambypamby worldly scientific religion is fast undermining the churches. Any preacher who is not willing to accept the Bible as his guide and the divinity of Jesus Chrst as the one chief text of his sermons should quit the church and go with the crowd to which he belongs, or he should get religion and quit lining up with the devil.—Carrollton Conservative.

YOU ARE PAYING FOR THE TRIP, MR. TAXPAYER.

The Sentinel is advised that Gov. Russell and his board of trustees have given their approval to sending three members of the board of trustees to a meeting of the National Educational Association in California. Right expensive trip, but you are footing the bill, Mr. Taxpayer. It possibly would have been all right and the proper thing to send one representative of the board of trustees, but in the face of high taxes and economic conditions in general, it looks like a wanton disregard of expenses and profligacy in the use of money that merits the condemnation of the Mississippi public.

But this is but one of the many other instances where the Russell administration has virtually said to the people, "You be d——d."

These men are sent across the country, a distance of about 3,000 miles, and yet Russell and his board are said to have claimed not to have funds enough to properly maintain the department of chemistry at the State University.

CLARION-LEDGER WRONG.

The usually accurate and well informed Clarion-Ledger makes an error that surprises us, in the following:

"Henry L. Whitfield, candidate for Governor, in his exposure of the "juggling of a job," at the University of Mississippi brings to light the manner in which the money of the taxpayers of Mississippi is being spent for "education." The bill making appropriation for the University of Mississippi went through with a rider that the "secretary" could not be paid over $2,500 per year. A brother of the former law partner of Governor Russell was the "secretary," and as soon as the legislature adjourned the job of "secretary was abolished, and the job of "business manager" established and the same man put in there at practically double the salary. If you believe in this kind of manipulation, vote to continue the Russell-Robertson political machine. If you want to get full value for your tax money, vote against this machine. That's good work, Candidate Whitfield; keep the people informed as to how their money has been spent and why taxes are high."

The Clarion-Ledger's error consists in giving Prof. Whitfield credit for this "exposure" and "juggling of a job." The Sentinel made the "exposure" when it published the payroll of the University. We are the ones who turned on the light.

In the same connection we would remind the Clarion-Ledger that we also showed that the president of the A. & M. College is being paid $6,000 a year in face of the law which limits his salary to $4,800. We have not observed that Prof. Whitfield or the Clarion-Ledger either has said anything about that. And that is not all the college data we published which showed that the law was being trodden under foot. More anon.

SAYS SHOULD BE CONNER.

The speech at the court house last night by Sennett Conner was an admirable one. It was sensible, dignified, constructive, given in a fine spirit, and very thoroughly covered the matters in which the people of the state are at present most interested.

The fact is Mr. Conner makes an unusual campaign speech. He does not indulge in rash promises. He states his idea of government regarding a given matter and then shows what his record has been in relation to that matter. He avoids spacious platitudes—those senseless phrases that "sound well but don't mean anything." He does not indulge in personalities or billingsgate—the cheap, vituperative language so often resorted to by the petty politician, and no one who hears him can sense the least tinge of demagoguery in his utterances. He is fair, honest, earnest and faithful in his pronouncements and evidences only a desire to serve the people rather than to be serving self.

All this is as it should be. A candidate for the office of Governor of Mississippi should be a man clothed with honor and dignity, and in presenting himself for the suffrage of the people, his claims for recognition should be altogether upon personal merit, past achievements and assurances of future usefulness based upon recent accomplishments.

Measured by these standards Sennet Conner stands in the front rank as a candidate for the highest office in the gift of the people of Mississippi.

And he is in the front rank. It is generally conceded that, with the tremendous momentum his candidacy has gained during the past month, he is the leading candidate, and gaining rapidly every day.

A synopsis of Mr. Conner's speech appears elsewhere. Read it.—Hattiesburg American, June 1.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

One fact that should be given thoughtful consideration by the negroes who are migrating northward is the alarming death rate among members of their race north of the Mason and Dixon line.

A few days since the Daily News printed a story from the Detroit News giving a graphic picture of deplorable conditions in that city during the past winter when negroes were literally dying like flies, frequently dropping dead on the streets and their bodies were carried to morgues, held for the usual period without identification, and finally buried in the potter's field.

The picture was not exaggerated. The negro fares poorly in a cold climate. When born and reared in the South, he easily becomes a victim of pneumonia or tuberculosis in a colder latitude.

Urban life—dwelling in cities—is also bad for the negro. He is, by nature, a country dweller, and fares better physically in the wider spaces. Prof. W. F. Wilcox ,of Cornell University, in his analysis of the federal census returns, reaches the following conclusions:

In every one of the Northern states negro deaths outnumber births; in the Southern states, in general, the conditions are reversed.

The difference between city and country is at least as influential upon race increase as the difference between South and North, which in this case closely parallels it. Throughout the North and in the cities of the South, negro deaths are more numerous than negro births; in fact, Southern cities are even more unfavorable than those of the North to natural increase.

In 1920, the negro population of the United States numbered 10,463,131. This represented a ten-year increase of 635,000, or 6.5 per cent, the lowest thus far recorded. In consequence of this slow numerical progress, the proportion formed by negroes in the total population declined from 10.7 per cent in 1910 to 9.9 per cent in 1920. The highest proportion, 19.3 per cent, was recorded in 1790. One hundred and thirty years later, at the census of 1920, the proportion had shrunk to slightly more than half of its original state. At the census of 1910, negroes showed the greatest percentage of increase, 37.5, derived from a numerical increase of 375,000, or more than one-half that recorded 110 years later. The decennial increases from 1850 to 1910 ranged from 765,000 to double that number, and thus the increase for 1910 to 1920 was lower than any previous decade since 1840. The negro increase was greater at each of the last two censuses before emancipation than at a census taken more than half a century after that event.

From these figures the evidence is conclusive that if the negro desires to perpetuate his race it is best for him to remain on the soil where he was born and reared, otherwise he faces the grave danger of passing from the stage of human action, just as the Indians are doing.—Jackson News.

DAVID E. CRAWLEY

The above is a picture of Hon. David E. Crawley, the present district attorney of this district, who is a candidate for re-election.

Mr. Crawley has made an able and fearless and conscientious district attorney. He has been so diligent and so untiring in his efforts to bring the law-breaker to the bar of justice that some of his friends believe that his diligence in handling the maker of moonshine liquor is one of the reasons that he has any opposition at all.

Mr. Crawley has been in the County this week and is making a hurried trip and seeing just as many as possible of the voters. He is beginning to look himself again. He had the flu and pneumonia last winter which put him to the bad physically for some time. His many friends rejoice that he is getting back to his wonted health.

WEEK OF CELEBRATION WILL MARK BIRTHDAY

On Tuesday, June 12, the Willys-Overland Company of Toledo ,Ohio, produced its one millionth car and this car bearing serial number 1,000,000, marking as it does a significant event in the annals of one of the world's largest automobiles industries, is being given official recognition by all Willy-Overland branches, distributors and dealers throughout the United States this week. The week has been set aside by President John N. Willys as Jubilee Week when celebrations are being carried out in every section of the country.

Big preparations were made to make the week a notable one, following a week of many functions in Toledo when the Willys-Overland Company entertained the leading civic clubs of the city at luncheons and dinners in the administration building.

The creation of the one millionth car is conducive to some retrospection. The original Overland was designed and built in Terre Haute, Indiana, in 1901, by Claude E. Fox, a youthful graduate of Rose Polytechnic Institute. The car proved to be an innovation due chiefly to the fact that the motor was placed over the front axle instead of being placed under the seat as were the engines in all other cars being made at that time, the designer insisting that the location over the front axle was the logical place and asserting that in time all manufacturers would recognize the advisability of it. Another decided improvement that the Overland had over other cars of that period was the seating arrangement. Early models of the car came out with the entrance to the rear seat from the side, while the entrance to the rear seat on other makes was from the rear. The Overland was also the first car to adopt the four doors now universally used.

The car was named Overland by Charles Minshall, then president of the Standard Wheel Works of Terre Haute and the advertising slogan in those days was "The Overland will get you there and back." Later on the plant was moved to Indianapolis and finally to Toledo, where the gigantic factories of the Willys-Overland Company are turning out over 1,000 cars a day.

BILLY SUNDAY HITS SOCIETY.

Takes Rap at Modern Styles of Dress.

Columbus, O., June 17.—"High society is so low down that it needs an airship to get to hell. The whole world needs the hose wash in God's bathhouse," shouted Billy Sunday, noted evangelist, addressing a local audience.

"Any fellow who can gaze upon one of the up-to-date janes and refrain from having a moral blowout ought to get a substantial pension," continued Sunday. "No one can tell me that a man can look upon a girl as she is dressed today with prayer-meeting thoughts in his mind. As I study the fashion plates, I will tell you the moral of the age. No one can tell me that dress has no bearing on the morals of men and women. I like to see a person dressed neatly. A person can be modest and still be neat.

"I watched tired, weary, jaded anaemic pleasure seekers roll from the theaters and I pity them,' 'said Sunday, declaring that pleasures and riches do not satisfy the soul and that men seek these dissipations when they really are longing for rest. "Drunken, faded-out clubmen pile into their cars in the early hours of morning and go home to perfumed baths and their servants tuck them in bed between luxuriant white sheets.

"No dog ever had anything but a dog for a daddy," sserted Sunday who said that "evolution is infidelic" and that no man who believes in the Darwinian theory "can call himself a Christian."

" Wouldn't you feel ashamed of yourself if you believed man gained superiority over woman by fighting for her so religiously when he was a chivalrous monkey that his brain power automatically was increased? And a better joke is the one of how man disposed of the monkey hair on his body. The lady monkeys didn't like the hair, so they picked the most hairless for their mates. To please the ladies, man gradually got rid of the hair on his body and became a human being."

Mr. E. C. Harrington, an ex-newspaper man and a citizen of Orlando, Florida, arrived in Grenada last Saturday and spent several days here. Mr. Harrington is old in the newspaper game and gives some rich experiences that came to him while guiding the destinies of two different newspapers. He is a most entertaining gentleman and those who got to know him will carry many pleasant recollections of his visit to the "City Beautiful."

Ford Motor No. 7,777,777 was turned out at the Ford Motor Co. on June 8th and shipped on that date to the Los Angeles branch of the company.

Sleeping Sickness Fly of Africa

How Method of Fighting This Pest Inspired Manufacture of Sweet Dreams Mosquito Remedy.

A traveler in relating his various experiences in Africa, casually mentioned how the natives protected themselves against the ravages of the Tsetse fly. As is generally known, the bite of this fly results in "sleeping sickness," a malady from which an unfortunate seldom recovers.

It was reasoned that a remedy capable of keeping off these flies would also keep mosquitoes off. So in America this remedy was reproduced as nearly as possible. Having been found exceptionally satisfactory as a mosquito remedy, this mixture has since been offered in commerce under the trade name of Sweet Dreams. The efficiency of the preparation has caused its immediate acceptance everywhere.

And the traveler doesn't yet know that his entertaining story resulted in the birth of an industry.

When mosquitoes are troublesome try Sweet Dreams. Red-top botles sold everywhere 35c or 3 bottles for $1.00.

DODGE BROTHERS
TOURING CAR

If there is one word which will sum up the average owner's impression of Dodge Brothers Touring Car, that word is dependable.

If there is a word to express the quality which Dodge Brothers have striven, above all else, to build into the Touring Car, it is —again—dependable.

Indeed, it is not too much to say that the word dependable has come to be definitely associated, the nation over, with Dodge Brothers Touring Car—and the other vehicles bearing their name.

Nor have Dodge Brothers built this enviable reputation through advertising. They have built motor cars, so dependable in fact that the word has presented itself automatically to the public mind.

Witness my official signature this the 5th day of April, 1923.

S. T. TATUM, Mayor.

We, the undersigned aldermen, hereby acknowledge service on us of the above notice more than three hours prior to the time set therefor.

(Signed) F. T. Gerard, W. E. Jackson, J. H. Murray, W. P. Ferguson, J. H. Horn.

I have served the above notice personally on each of the above named aldermen and city recorder more than three hours prior to the time set for said meeting, except W. R. Schultz, absent from state temporarily.

This April 11, 1923.

J. C. GARNER, Special Police.

Board of mayor and aldermen met this the 11th day of April, 1923, at five o'clock p. m., pursuant to notice recorded on these minutes. Present: mayor, marshal ,recorder, and all aldermen except Mr. Schultz.

The following resolution was offered for adoption and after being read and considered by the board it was moved and sconded that the same be adopted as read. The mayor then put the question to a vote and the ayes and the noes being taken, the vote stoo das follows: Ayes: F. T. Gerard, J. H. Murray, J. H. Horn; Noes: Dr. W. P. Ferguson, on proposition as a whole. Absent and not voting, W. R. Schultz. Whereupon the mayor declared that the resolution having received a legal majority cast was duly and lawfully adopted as follows:

A resolution declaring the surbing, storm sewering and paving of certain portions of certain streets to be necessary and looking to a special assessment therefore.

Be it resolved by the mayor and board of aldermen of the city of Grenada, Mississippi ,that it is deemed, adjudged and hereby declared to be necessary by the mayor and aldermen of the city of Grenada that certain portions of certain streets in said city be curbed, guttered and storm sewered and paved as herein provided.

Said surbing, guttering, storm sewering and paving o fsaid respective streets is hereby declared and adjudged to be a special improvement whic his respectivel ynecessary and which requires an unusual outlay and expense in excess of the general improvement fund of said city, and in the judgment of the mayor and board of aldermen of said city the general improvement fund of said city should not be used for the purpose of making such respective special improvements.

Said curbing, guttering, storm sewering and paving will be done according to and as provided by plans and specifications therefor by the mayor and aldermen of said city, and the paving shall be of concrete, asphalt, bithulitic or some other suitable and proper paving to be hereafter determined by said mayor and aldermen, all the work to be done according to plans and specifications.

Said curbing, guttering, storm stwering and paving of said respective portions of said respective streets will be ordered to be done the kind and character of paving as afresaid, to be hereafter selected by the mayor and aldermen, and the cost thereof wil lbe required to be borne by the owners of prporety abutting on said respective portions o fsaid respective streets at all points when said streets to be so specially improved by the owners of property on one side of said respective portions of said respective streets paying one-third of the cost thereof and the owners of the property on the opposite side of said respective portions of sai dstreets paying one-third thereof and the city paying the remainder thereof, unless within ten days after the completion of the publication of this resolution as required by the city charter there is filed with the mayor and aldermen of said city a protest against said respective portions of said respective streets by a majority of the property owners residing upon or otherwise occupying property owned by them and included within the respective portions of said streets above set forth; or unless at the regular May, 1923, meeting of said city to be held May 7, 1923, at 7:30 p. m. at the mayor's office in said city that the mayor and aldermen shall allow such objections to said respective special improvements on said respective streets or parts thereof as may be presented therein and determined, and at such meeting hear and consider such objections as may be made to said special improvements or parts thereof as may be made by any person affected or interested whether resident or non-resident, allowing them to be heard in person or by counsel or both.

Any property owner affected by this resolution shall have the right to make the special improvements aforesaid for himself, but for the sake of uniformity in the work such special improvements must be done in accordance fith the plans and specifications adopted by the mayor and aldermen, and the property owner shall do the work within thirty days after the order of the board shall have been passed for such special improvements. If the owner of any property abutting upon any portion of said streets above set forth and so ordered to be specially improved shall fail to improve same as required within thirty days after the order shall have been passed therefor and according to plans and specifications as aforesaid, the mayor and aldermen shall cause said improvements to be made and the cost of so specially improving said respective portions of said respective streets as aforesaid shall be assessed against the abutting property as foresaid, the owners of one side thereof to pay one-third therof, the owners of the opposite side thereof to pay one-third thereof and the city paying the remainder as aforesaid.

That this resolution take effect and be in force from and after passage and that it be published in said city once a week for three successive weeks as required by the city charter approved.

Meeting adjourned.

IS CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING BENEFICIAL TO THE COMMUNITY GENERALLY?

how many apples rotted as long as he could buy for low prices and sell for as much as the market would bear. The grower had to sell his crop when it was ready. He could not pay for storage, and consequently could not wait until prices were better. He was alone; there was no one to help him. Had there been a co-operative marketing association he could have had storage and could have sold his apples at the best market or direct to the retail dealer. In the Spokane valley a commission house in 1921 received $2.18 for a box of apples, while an association received $2.98, because it marketed them more efficiently. The damage caused by changing hands was lessened, since most of the handling was eliminated. Therefore, this producer could have disposed of his fruit at a profit, dispensed with the middleman and put out a better product for the consumer.

But how does co-operative marketing benefit the community? First, let us consider the question, "What is a benefit to the community?" A benefit to the community is something which directly or indirectly brings some help or convenience to all of its members. Observation has taught us that large enterprises are beneficial to the community because they bring more money to it, and consequently hasten its development. Co-operative marketing, by helping the farmer to prosper, does the same thing. It increases the purchasing power of the farmer and brings more trade to the merchants. Countless places are benefitted through better products and lower prices. When a small town thrives, it can give employment to more people and becomes a better place in which to live; consequently more people move in. A large community is able to afford many more conveniences than a small one. It can have water, electric lights, sidewalks and public schools. Therefore, co-operative marketing, by aiding the farmer, is beneficial to the community. The proof that it is a good thing is shown by 14,000 co-operative marketing associations. Since any good organization will live, it will live, and will continue to bring good will and prosperity wherever those enlightened see fit to take advantage of its great opportunities.

The above paper was that of Spencer Murphy, and was awarded the medal as being the best of all the papers on this subject prepared by students of the twelfth grade of Grenada High School. The medal was offered by the Interstate Trust & Banking Co. of New Orleans to stimulate interest in this very important matter. This bank has been offering a similar medal to be given upon some matter of general public interest for several years, and in doing so, it is performing a good public service.

PURGE THE UNIVERSITIES.

Are you contemplating sending your son or daughter to one of the big colleges or universities for the purpose of completing his or her education?

Think well before you act. Study carefully the inside history of the "higher education" institution you have in mind before you send your child away.

The appalling scandals that have emanated from some of these institutions leads one to suspect that they are not as immaculate as they pretend to be.

Education is a necessity but it should not be acquired at the expense of converting a high-minded boy or girl into one of questionable physical and moral habits.

When existing conditions demonstrate that the officials of a university are unable to control the students, then the institution ceases to be worthy of public confidence, and parents send their children to it at the peril of the future character of their offspring.

And when the officials and trustees of a university seek to cover up the rottenness existing in their institutions, those trustees and officials become menaces to the public welfare of the American people. The public should take warning. Some, at least, of the universities need purging—if not closing.—Winona Times.

A show of irritation when dealing with one whom you would advise betrays a lack of self-control that displays a low degree of personal culture.—Selected.

CHAPTER XIII

A Rope Breaks.

The lantern, turned down, dimly illumined the tent and revealed the figures of three men seated about some sort of rough table. The flap was drawn and fastened. Occasionally a figure moved slightly. No passer-by would have guessed that the three partners were ensconced in the black mouth of the tunnel, ramparted by the dump heap, watching for developments they were fairly sure would start with darkness. Every little while Sandy twitched a line that was attached to a clumsy but effective rocker he had contrived beneath one of the dummies they had built from the stuff that Plimsoll had not reclaimed.

"Don't want to work the blamed thing too much," he said. "Might bu'st it. It's on'y the one figger but I'll be derned if it don't look natcherul."

After which they all relapsed into silence, restrained from smoking for fear of a telltale spark or casual fragrance carried by the wind. It was a dark night, the hillsides stood blurry against a blue-black sky in which the stars glittered like metal points but failed to shed much light. Later, much later, toward morning, a moon would rise.

They settled down to their watch. The Great Bear constellation dipped down, scooping into the darkness beyond the opposing hill.

"Pritty close to midnight," said Sam at last. "What's the . . ."

Sandy's grip on his arm checked him, all senses centering into listening.

The three stared blankly into the night, while their hands sought gun butts and loosened the weapons in their holsters. Out of the blackness came little foreign sounds that they interpreted according to their powers. The tiny clink of metal, the faint thud of horses' hoofs, an exclamation that had barely been above the speaker's breath floated up to them through the stillness. The glow of the lantern showed through the tent wall.

They crouched, listening to the soft padded sounds that told of the approach of man and horse. These ceased. Still they could see nothing. Then there came a sharp shrill whistle, answered from the levels. Followed instantly the thud of galloping ponies going at top speed, parallel, one between the watchers and the tent as they saw the swift shadow shade the glow for an instant, the other between the tent and the creek. There was a sharp swishing as of something whipping brush.

"Yi-yi-yippy!" The cries rang out exultant as the horses dashed by the tunnel. The light in the tent wavered, went out. There was a shout of surprise and dismay, a twang like the snapping of a mighty bow-string and then came the whoops of the trio from the Three Star as they realized what the attempt had been and how it had failed.

Two riders, trailing a rope, had raced down the valley hoping to sweep away the tent, to send its occupants sprawling, its contents scattered in a confusion of which advantage would be taken to chase the three off their claims, taken by surprise, made ridiculous.

Sandy and Sam, searching for a convenient tent site, had happened upon a mass of outcrop, overgrown by brush. Over this they had pitched the tent, using the rock for table, propping their dummies about it. If dynamite was flung it would find something to work against. They had not anticipated the use of the rope to demolish the canvas, any more than the two riders had expected to bring up against a boulder. The impact, with their ponies spurred, urged on by their shouts to their limit, tore the cinches of one saddle loose, jerked it from the horse and catapulted the unprepared rider over its head, flying through the air to land heavily, while his mount, unencumbered, frightened, went careering off leaving its breathless master stunned amid the sage.

As the cinches had given way at one end, the line itself had parted at the other. The second pony had stumbled sidewise, rolling before the man was free from the saddle. They could hear it thrashing in the willows, the rider cursing as he tried to remount while Sandy ran cat-footed down the hill, leaving Mormon and Sam to handle the other.

The two found their man groaning and limp.

"Don't believe he's bu'sted anything," announced Sam, "'less he's druv his neck inter his shoulders. Got his saddle, Mormon?"

"Yep. Want the rope?"

They trussed their captive with the lariat still snubbed to his saddle-horn. Down in the willows there was a flash, a report, a scurrying flight punctuated by an oath almost as vivid as the shot. Sandy came up the hill toward them.

"Miss him?" asked Mormon.

"It was sure dahk," said Sandy, "and I hated to plug the hawss. So I only took one shot to cheer him on his way. He was mountin' at the time an' it was a snapshot. I aimed at the seat of his pants. I w'udn't be surprised but what he's ridin' so't of one-sided. Who you got here? Tote him downhill. I don't believe they bu'sted the lantern. We'll take a look at him."

Sandy retrieved the lantern from the collapsed canvas and lit it. Mormon and Sam took the senseless man down to the creek, where they attempted to revive him by pouring hatfuls of the icy water on his head. He was a black-haired chap, sallow of face, clean-shaven. His clothes were those of a cowman.

"Looks a heap like a drowned rat," said Mormon. "It's Sol Wyatt, one of Plim's riders oveh to his hawss ranch. He got fired from the Two-Bar-Circle fo' leavin' his ridin' iron to home an' usin' anotheh brand. Leastwise, that's what they suspected. He's sniffin', Sandy; what we goin 'to do with him?"

"Take him up inter camp, soon's he's able to walk an' hand him over to Plimsoll with our compliments. They figgered they'd make us all look plumb ridiculous with bein' flipped out of the tent. Then they'd have had the crowd on their side erlong with the l'af, way it usually goes."

Wyatt opened a pair of shifty black eyes to consciousness and the light of the lantern and immediately closed them again, playing opossum. Sam prodded him gently in the ribs.

"Wake up, Sol," he said. "Come back to earth, you sky-salutin' circus-rider. You sure looped the loops 'fore you lit. Git up!"

Wyatt gasped and sat up, grinning foolishly.

"What happened?" he asked.

"Nothin'," answered Sandy. "Jest nothin'. How's yore haid?"

"Some tender."

"It ain't in first-rate condition or you w'udn't be drawin' pay from Plimsoll. Yore saddle's here, yore hawss went west. Ef you want to leave the saddle till you locate the hawss, you can git it 'thout any trouble any time you come fo' it. Or you can pack it with you now. We're goin' up to camp. I don't figger we'll be jumped ag'in befo' morning. Ef we are, why, we'll have to start the arguments all over."

"I w'udn't be surprised," said the philosophic Wyatt, gingerly pressing his head with his fingertips, "but what there is a gen'ral impression 'stablished by this time that you three hombres from the Three Star are right obstinate about considerin' this yere property."

"You leavin' camp with Plimsoll in the mornin'?" Mormon asked casually.

"I heard some rumor about his hittin' the sunrise trail," said Wyatt. "Ef he goes, I stay. I'm a li'l fed up on Jim Plimsoll lately. He pulls too much on his picket line to suit me. Ef he's got a yeller stripe on his belly, I'm quittin'. Some day he's goin' to git inter a hole that'll sure test his standard. Me, I may be a bit of a wolf, but I'm d—d ef I trail with coyotes. I'll leave my saddle. Any of you got the makin's? I seem to have lost most everything but my clothes. I shed a gun round here somewheres."

"You can have it when you come back fo' yore saddle, Wyatt," said Sandy. "Where was you an' yore pal goin' to repo't back to Plimsoll?"

Wyatt grinned in the lantern light.

"Ef we trailed inter his place an' made a bet on the red over to the faro table he'd sabe everything went off fine an' dandy. He w'udn't figger we'd show at all if it didn't come off. An' we w'udn't have. It was a win-or-lose job. Pay if it was pulled off. Otherwise, nothin' doin'. You hombres treated me white. There's a lot who'd have plugged me full of lead an' death. I was on yore land. Ef you force me to walk into Plimsoll's place ahead of you I ain't resistin' none, an' I shall sure admire to watch Plim's face when he sees you-all back of me."

He took the trail ahead of them, hands in his pockets, his cigarette glowing. Behind him walked Sandy.

"He's a cool sort of a cuss," said Sam to Mormon. "I reckon he's a bad actor, but there's sure somethin' erbout the galoot I like. He ain't over fond of Plimsoll, that's a sure thing, if he is workin' fo' him. Wonder why?"

"They tell me," replied Mormon, "thet Plimsoll's apt to be fond of the other feller's gal. He ain't satisfied with what he can pick for himself. T'otheh feller's apple allus has a sweeter core. I w'udn't wondeh but what that was the trouble."

As they entered the street of the camp Sandy moved up even with Wyatt and locked arms with him.

"I ain't goin' ter make no break," said Wyatt. "Here's Plim's. Jest you let me go in ahead through the door. I've seen you use your guns. I ain't suicidin'."

They allowed him to go in first, unescorted. Their plans held no further reprisal against Wyatt.

CHAPTER XIV

A Free-for-All.

Plimsoll had set up a working partnership with a man who had brought moonshine and bootlegged whisky to the camp, occupying the next shack to the gambling place. For convenience of service extra doors had been cut and a rough-boarded passageway erected between the two places. Plimsoll himself presided over the stud-poker table, dealing the game. He waited the result of his play with Wyatt and the latter's companions. Wyatt and his fellow rider had been detailed to ride down the tent that had been reported occupied by the Three Star owners. That part of the plan had been suggested by Wyatt out of the sheer deviltry of his invention. Plimsoll had enlisted others of his following, none too fearless, to loiter in the brush and, in the general confusion, fire to cripple and to kill.

Plimsoll had learned of the visit of the men who had come with Bill Brandon to investigate Plimsoll's methods of running the Waterline horse ranch. He had learned, through the leakage that always occurs in a cattle community, that Brandon claimed to be an old acquaintance of Sandy and his partners. So he had told his men who had come with him to the camp from the Waterline ranch that the Three Star outfit was a danger to all of them, undoubtedly acting as spies for Brandon, and that they should be eliminated for the general good. But there was none of them, from Plimsoll down, who had any fancy to stand up against the guns of Sandy, or of Mormon and Sam, when the breaks were anywhere nearly even.

Plimsoll, with his ejection from Hereford, the advent of woman suffrage, the coming of Brandon and other irate horse owners, had begun to realize that his days were getting short in the land. He looked to the camp for a final coup. If he held the Casey claims and sold them, as he expected to do, to an Eastern capitalist to whom he had telegraphed some days before, he might re-establish himself. Sandy's prompt arrival and subsequent events had crimped that plan and he fell back upon all the crooked tactics that he possessed in gambling. And now, if Wyatt . . .

He was dealing the last card around when Wyatt came in, and his eyes lit up. Then his face stiffened, the light changed to a gleam of malevolence. Following Wyatt were the three partners, taking open order as they came through the entrance, about which the space was clear, Sandy in the middle, Mormon on the right flank and Sam on the left. The two last smiled and nodded to one or two acquaintances. Sandy's face was set in serious cast. The players at Plimsoll's table turned to see what caused the suspension of the game, others followed their example. The Three Star men were known personally to some of those in the room. The story of what had happened during the day had buzzed in everybody's ears, from Roaring Russell's discomfiture to Plimsoll's failure to hold the claims and the eviction notice served on him by Sandy.

Chairs edged back, the standing moved for a better viewpoint, the room focussed on Plimsoll, Wyatt and the three cow-chums. Then Wyatt stepped aside. There was a malicious little grin on his face. Mormon's suggestion as to his private grudge against Plimsoll was not without foundation. Wyatt had been glad to find excuse for severing relations with the gambler. He had done his best and failed, but his failure was not bitter.

The partners walked between the tables toward Plimsoll who sat regarding them balefully, his teeth just showing between his parted lips, cards in midair, action in a paralysis that was caused by the concentration forced by Sandy's even gaze, by the same sickening conviction that his manhood shriveled in front of Sandy and that Sandy knew it. The placing of bets ceased, there was no sound of clicking chips, the roulette dealer held the wheel, expectant, dealer and casekeeper at the faro bank halted their manipulations, the presiding genius of the craps layout picked up the dice. Tragedy hovered, the shadow of its wing was on the dirt floor of the rude Temple of Chance.

"The chaps you sent up to move yore tent an' truck didn't make a good job of it, Plimsoll," drawled Sandy. "I reckon they warn't the right so't of help. Ef you-all are almin' to take that stuff erlong with you I'd recommend you 'tend to it yorese'f. It's gettin' erlong to'ards sunup, fast as a clock can tick."

Silence held. Sandy stood noncommittal, at ease. His conversation with

Silence Held. Sandy Stood Noncommittal, at Ease—

Plimsoll might have been of the friendliest nature gauged by his attitude. His hands were on his hips. Back of him, slightly turning toward the crowd, were Mormon and Sam, smilingly surveying the room. But not one there but knew that, faster than the ticking of a clock, guns might gleam and spurt fire and lead in case of trouble.

"I'll attend to my own business in my own way," said the gambler, knowing the room weighed every word. It was a noncommittal statement and a light one, but it passed the situation for the moment.

Sandy pulled out a gunmetal watch. "I make it half afteh one. 'Bout three hours to sunrise, Plimsoll. I'll be round later." He turned his back on the gambler and sauntered toward the door. A few followed the three out into the street, among them, Wyatt.

"I got a hunch it ain't extry healthy fo' me in there," he said. "A gamblin' parlor where I ain't welcome to stay or play makes no hit with me."

Many blocks away, men were watching the mesa whence came a high-powered car, rushing at high speed, magnificently driven, taking curve and pitch and level with superb judgment. Two men were in the tonneau. One of them leaned forward, looking at the crowd, a square-jawed man, clean-shaven but for the bristle of a silver mustache beneath an aggressive nose, above a firm hard mouth and determined chin. The mintage of the East was stamped upon his features. He was a man accustomed to sway, if not to lead. His companion was as plainly an Eastern product, but his manner was subordinate.

"I'm looking for a man named Plimsoll," said the first of these two, his voice an indication that he was accustomed to a quick answer. "He wired me about some claims. Where'll I find him?"

"You'll likely find him at his place," answered a miner. "Up-street on the left. Name's outside."

They let the car go on in a lane that was pressed out of their ranks. They fell in behind or alongside of it as it passed slowly up the street. Sandy turned to Mormon.

"You better see Miss Mirandy up to her claim," he said, his voice casual enough. Mormon started an appeal, but it died unvoiced. The spinster knew nothing of the clash impending between Sandy and the gambler.

Sandy walked up the street without hurry and, as they had made way from the car, men gave him space. The nearer he got to Plimsoll's place the more room they allowed him. They melted away from the car on all sides, leaving it clearest between the machine and the entrance to the gambling shack. The man with the square face looked alertly about him at the crowd, giving place to the lean tall man walking leisurely up the street, high lights touching the metal of the two guns that hung in holsters well to the front of his hips. Sandy's face was serene, but there was no mistaking the fact that the star performer of the moment had come upon the stage. Five paces back of him strolled Sam, his eyes dancing with the excitement that did not show in Sandy's steel-gray orbs. Westlake followed to one side, by the advice of Sam.

It was Plimsoll's way—the professional gambler's way—to play his cards until he knew himself beaten. He had been hoping for the arrival of this man. He represented capital, the development of the camp into a mining town, the movement of money, the boom of quick sales. With his backing—once the camp understood what it meant to all of them—he might turn the tables on Sandy Bourke. The protection of Capital was powerful.

He came out licking his lips nervously, with a swift survey that took in the setting of the stage prepared for his entrance. His eyes, shifting from the big machine, as if drawn by something beyond his will, focused on the figure of Sandy, easy but sinister in its capacity to avoid all melodrama. Half-way between door and car he halted.

"Plimsoll?" said the stranger. "I am Keith."

The light was perceptibly changing. Faces of men came out of the shadows, pale but visible. In the east the sky showed gray behind the dark purple crests between which mists were trailing.

"Plimsoll," said Sandy. "That peak oveh on Sawtooth range is goin' to catch the light first. I'll call it sun-up when the sun looks oveh the mesa."

Plimsoll bared his teeth in a fox-grin. Sandy stood with his hands by his sides, covering him with his eyes. Plimsoll looked at the hands that he knew could move swifter than he could follow, he looked at the car with Keith gazing from him to Sandy, he sensed the waiting strain of all the men, waiting to see Sandy shoot—if he did not go, to see him crumple up in the dust, and—he looked at the peak on Sawtooth and his face grayed as the granite suddenly flushed with rose. His will melted, he turned and went inside his cabin. No one followed him, there was no one inside to greet him. His heart was filled with helpless rage, centered against Sandy Bourke. He knew the camp was against him, considering him outbluffed or outmatched. His horse, ready saddled, had been at the door since midnight. He mounted, dug spurs into the beast's flanks and went galloping madly up the slope that rose from the street gulch leading down to the main gulch of Flivver creek. His plans for wealth had been blocked by a man he dared not face. Before Sandy Bourke his spirit flinched as a leaf shrinks and curls from flame.

MONEY IN HOGS.

We commend to the farmers of this territory the experience of Mr. Will Marsh, a Lee County, Mississippi, farmer who resides at Plantersville. From one brood sow Mr. Marsh has produced 122 pigs in 67 months. Twenty-two of this number died in infancy and 100 were successfully raised. Seventy-nine pigs were sold for $1,066.28, or an average of $13.50. Our correspondent figures the sow worth $15, and estimates the value of the lot at $1,364.78. The cost has been $50 a year, or $250, giving a net profit of $1,114.78.

What Mr. Marsh has done can be done by other farmers, and what he has made from one brood sow could be doubled by two or trebled by three.—News-Scimitar.

S. W. SIMPSON, OF DISTRICT 3, SEEKS MAGISTRATE'S OFFICE

With the other list of candidates and in the proper column will be seen the name of Mr. S. W. Simpson who asks the people of district 3 to elect him to the office of justice of the peace.

In this particular time when the making of moonshine whiskey and the practicing of those evils that attend it are so common, it would seem that there was never before a time when the office of justice of the peace was more important. Certainly Mr. Simpson has thought over these matters, and the fact that a man seeks to serve the public in an official capacity should mean that he understands the duties of the place and is qualified, else he would not be a candidate. Mr. Simpson will no doubt visit the voters of his district and give them an opportunity to pass upon his availability and willingness to properly meet the duties of the office.

J. M. FRANKLIN, FOR CONSTABLE, BEAT 3

The Sentinel is authorized to say to the voters of district 3, Grenada County, that Mr. J. M. Franklin desires to serve them as constable. Mr. Franklin has no doubt thought over seriously what the duties of the place he seeks demand, otherwise it is assumed that he would not have announced. He offers as his best testimony his standing with his neighbors and those who know him best as an earnest of what may be expected of him, should he be elected. The Sentinel feels sure that the voters of beat 3 will give Mr. Franklin's candidacy due consideration.

MT. NEBO COMMUNITY CLUB MEETS

The Mt. Nebo Community Club met Thursday afternoon, June 7th, at the club rooms with good attendance. After the meeting was called to order by the community leader, Mrs. Frank Anderson, the regular program was carried out. The matter of securing outside phone connection was referred to a committee which is to ascertain the cost, etc. A farm record was discussed by Mrs. Anderson who displayed a very instructive original chart during the course of her remarks. Miss Annabelle Clark read a very interesting paper on Co-operation. The men and boys belonging to the club were then entertained by Mr. E. H. White, county agent, while Misses Lee and Kibler entertained the ladies and girls.

Mrs. Lee Clark presented a very able discussion of the Spring and Summer Garden while Mrs. W. H. Usry handled the discussion of a Fall and Winter Garden excellently.

The meeting adjourned after a program had been arranged for the next meeting which will be held on Thursday, July 5.
